InVision INV-7 is a suspension mount to suit diaphragm condensers, shotgun microphones, anything else of a similar size.

It's typically used indoors, where a heavy wind solution is not required.

For studio use, InVision INV-7 excels with mics such as Neumann KM184 cardioid pencil condenser, for instrument applications, Sennheiser MKH146 for radio V/O work, or the mighty Beyerdynamic hypercardioid end-address ribbon mic, for guitar vocals and more.

2 x 19-25mm universal clips, with Standard (7mm wide) LyreLong bar with 70mm centres

There's a surprisingly good (albeit a bit dry) video to show the effectiveness of InVision series suspensions, including the cable clamp.

And the blurb from Rycote..."InVision Studio Suspensions provide unparalleled protection from shock, vibration, and handling noise for miniature, handheld, and shotgun microphones. Using Rycote's exclusive Lyre technology, these shock-mounts are virtually unbreakable and effective at any temperature. For additional protection, all models are designed with an integral cable clamp to isolate cable vibration from the microphone"
