There's a lot to like about Shure SM7B. For starters, it's one of the accepted standard microphones used in radio, TV, and broadcast. But that's not all of the story, SM7B is also a rocking vocal mic for studio use. With typical dynamic microphone qualities like excellent rejection of surrounding noises, focus on the intended source, this mic is often the go-to choice for engineers when laying down a vocal scratch track in the control room while the band smashes out a smoking take. If these scratch tracks happen to be good enough to be the 'keeper', SM7B is your mic.
